June is National Cancer Survivor Month, an awareness and education campaign celebrating survivors, the newly diagnosed, those in treatment and those who have completed cancer treatment. Thanks to spectacular advances in cancer research and treatment, more than 16.9 million people in the U.S. are cancer survivors living with, through and beyond their disease.

The Duke Supportive Care & Survivorship Center at Duke Cancer Institute has set aside June 1 for its annual commemoration of this important occasion—Survivorship Day 2022. The event will be presented in a virtual format for the continued protection of those we serve in this uncertain pandemic time.

Join us for a jam-packed day featuring panel discussions on topics such as parenting with cancer, taking care of your body during and after treatment, improving health through managing stress, and the evolution of the cancer survivor.

Interactive online workshops are back by popular demand, and audience questions are welcome. Participate in gentle yoga, tai chi and sound healing, all offered by area experts.

“Survivorship Day is a treasured DCI event that each year celebrates survivors, supports individuals and families facing cancer, and inspires the newly diagnosed,” said Cheyenne Corbett, PhD, director of cancer support and survivorship. “While we are unable to come together in person for this event, our doctors, therapists, child life specialists, social workers, self-image consultants and other experts nevertheless remain committed to this annual tradition by hosting online interactive workshops and panel discussions and recording video presentations. Our team stands united, on this day and every day, to raise awareness about the challenges that cancer survivors face.”
