Hearing that you have cancer can be an overwhelming experience for patients and their loved ones. “Our patients who learned of a new cancer diagnosis during the global pandemic have expressed feeling a profound sense of isolation as they navigated their treatments and other medical appointments without the physical support of family or friends,” shared Jean Hartford-Todd, Duke Cancer Patient Support Program child life specialist and co-lead for KidsCan!.

Hartford-Todd continued, “Patients with young children and teens have shared that their children have also felt alone and they have been forced to have a constant front row seat to their parents’ cancer illness without the support and distraction of school, playdates and extra-curricular activities.” Being able to provide the virtual KidsCan! program has allowed children and teens who participate in KidsCan! to connect with peers at a crucial time.

KidsCan!, which offers a safe space to communicate about the cancer experience and fosters community among patients and families, had to pivot from their traditional in-person monthly meetings at the start of the pandemic. The program leaders wanted to ensure the content shared each month would be engaging and used beyond just the online meeting. To meet this goal, families are mailed a package with the materials needed to participate in theme-based activities each month.

Hannah Sasser, Duke Cancer Patient Support Program child life specialist and co-lead of KidsCan!, explains the purpose of these packages. “These packages have served as the vehicle to provide cancer education and encourage conversations both in the home and at our virtual KidsCan! meetings each month. They help to build on the supportive relationships that are most important—how families support each other.

The materials are empowering to parents as well as engaging for children, serving an important role in

Cancer Support Services

Duke Cancer Institute offers a variety of support services and resources for patients and their loved ones to assist with navigating life during and after cancer treatment. In honor of this year’s Survivorship Day, the Supportive Care and Survivorship Center created DukeCancerInstitute.org/SurvivorshipDay—a site featuring videos that highlight each of the services listed in this calendar.

We encourage you to visit these sites to hear directly from our providers who strive to make the cancer experience better for everyone we serve.

Patient and Nurse Navigation

Navigators help identify and evaluate barriers to timely diagnosis and treatment of cancer. We focus on patients who are faced with multiple barriers such as transportation, housing and financial concerns. To learn more, visit DukeCancerInstitute.org/SurvivorshipDay/Navigating-Your-Care.

Clinical Social Work

Oncology and palliative care social workers help patients and their loved ones cope with the emotional and practical concerns that accompany the diagnosis and treatment of cancer. Individuals and family members are assessed to identify and address specific needs. We work together to establish interventions to help you alleviate stressors and financial burden associated with cancer diagnoses, as well as connect you and your loved ones to resources such as disability, home health/hospice, advance directives and end of life care. To learn more, visit DukeCancerInstitute.org/SurvivorshipDay/Navigating-Your-Care/Social-Work.

establishing conversations and quality engagement for families.”

In addition to ongoing cancer education, the themes of coping, problem solving, mindfulness, bravery and love are evident in each set of materials. These themes encourage connectedness, resiliency and care among families, which are helpful tools in coping with the daily changes a family faces when there is a cancer diagnosis.

KidsCan! offers a take-home family meal, available for pick-up the Monday prior to the KidsCan! meeting. In addition, parents have the option to participate in a group just for them on the first Monday of the month at noon. During this group parents share their successes and challenges related to supporting their children and teens during the cancer experience.

Patients and their families interested in KidsCan! can choose to participate in any or all of the offerings. This service is available at no charge to families with children and teens ages 4–18. If you are interested in participating, call 919.684.4497 or email cancersupport@Duke.edu.
